SATURDAY MARCH 27 1869

The True Policy for Maine.

No State in the Union has more natural facilities for manufacturing enterprise and profitable internal improvement than the State of Maine. No State has so much valuable unimproved and useless land. While communities in other parts of the country have grown up and flourished where scarcely any except artificial inducements were offered, our great privileges have been suffered to lie idle and our towns to languish in the face of natural wealth. While great manufacturing towns have elsewhere grown up as if by magic around the busy hives of manufactories and railroads, our superior qualifications have gained us no wealth, and our natural advantages have not been allowed to give our State the standing it deserves in the world's advance.

But the State of Maine cannot much longer remain this inactive. She must accept the situation as the new generation finds it, and she must settle the question of her future career according to the new and growing demands of the age. The time seems near at hand when the problem for the people of this State shall be, not as has appeared heretofore, how they could prevent innovation, but how to keep pace with the rest of mankind. The growth of this country, consists of no delay in its members. A State, must inevitably rise and advance, or it must fall and forever. The question of existence is involved in the question of improvement. The failure of the past, must be remembered only as a warning for the future.

The causes of our tardiness are and have been too painfully apparent to deserve rehearsal at length. It does not require extraordinary wisdom to guess what we might have been made under a different state of things. The Penobscot and the Kennebec, with their tributaries are unsurpassed for water power, they have offered the capital that has sought to invest itself from time to time. Our agricultural and mineral resources have been waiting for the development which a little encouragement might have brought them through new channels of communication. The State of Maine, knowing how to promote, has stood with folded arms and allowed others less naturally qualified to push her on the road to power.

Jealousy and timidity have combined to prevent our advancement in every direction. Great capitalists came to our State ready to co-operate with us in building up extensive manufactories. They were met at the very threshold with discouragement and have invested their capital in less favorable communities, where enterprise invited them. If they asked the right of a water power, our towns said, You are a monopoly desiring only to get rich on our privileges. If they asked that consideration of their expending large capital they should be exempt from burdens for a short time, every man, from the laborer to the millionaire, said No; you must not allow our lands from which to enrich yourselves. We prefer to do without you. The few capitalists proposed to build a railroad or to start any enterprise by which our State or the towns were expected to lend a helping hand a cry was at once started against the monopoly which only sought increased aggrandizement. If one section started an enterprise, another section would fight it to the wall through fear of competition. The extreme desire of our people to prevent a few men getting more than a moderately wealthy has kept us in the rear, when we ought to be in the van.

There is not time to improve upon this order of things. We cannot regain the past opportunities, but we may forelay for the future. We cannot atone for past errors except in learning wisdom for future action. We must first lay aside our local jealousies, we must next discard our foolish fear of monopolies; we must be more liberal with enterprises generally. What should we care if our neighbors got rich. Why should we fear or envy the power of a few men if the company is extensive trade and commerce. Why should we hesitate in giving a corporation privileges that will result in returning us ultimately tenfold?

For years other sections where a more liberal spirit has prevailed, and the lesson cannot be mistaken. The Erie Railway is more food for gamblers, and one or only a half dozen men directly but what would New York do without it. The Northwestern Railway Company is a wild and outrageous monopoly yet without the immense trade of its many branches, Chicago to-day would be little better than it city struggling to hold its own. Manchester, Birmingham, Lowell, Lawrence, and other great centres, have found riches through flowed fortune and selfish corporations that were only induced to lay the foundations of those places by liberal offers of reward. So in a majority of instances it is to selfish corporations that we must look for any great work that is impossible to be accomplished by local capital and enterprise alone.

Having unsurpassed facilities for manufacturing and superior resources for development, the State of Maine needs and must have capital with which to work, and to this end we must adopt a new and liberal policy. We should, by organized and individual effort, invite capital from abroad to occupy our hundreds of excellent water privileges with manufactories of all kinds. We should offer them rights such as they cannot refuse, such as they can find nowhere else. Our mistake has been in fighting for capital, we must now favor it—we must bid for it. It is not too late now to build up great manufacturing towns on the Penobscot and the Kennebec. Then we shall need more railroads, which must be encouraged by all reasonable means. Our extended territory cannot be properly developed without more ready communication. Hidden treasures and fertile wilds are awaiting them now. Drawing out our vast productions, railroads must at the same time draw in a more extended foreign commerce. We must connect ourselves more extensively with the grain marts of the West. We can compete with New York as an outlet for the Lake States and Canada. Portland is moving in that direction, and the whole State should encourage her. This move, in connection with our own railroad into the Provinces, will make Maine the thoroughfare between England and the whole United States. We must open up our great inland and agricultural regions. North of us, and we must connect our isolated sea port towns by chains of railroad. With these objects in view, the people should be indoctrinated. More liberality should be brought to understand that a local improvement is to benefit the whole State, and that the whole State must protect and encourage every part. With the best harbors in the country, with the most powerful water privileges in New England, with thousands of acres of the most productive lands, with lakes and rivers offering superior facilities for navigation, with unequalled timber lands and the best lumber market in the United States, possessing the natural highway from Great Britain to the Great West, there is no reason to doubt that a general invasion of more liberality and courage amongst our people, may raise the State of Maine to a wealthy, active population, in wealth, and intellectual power.

Our Navigation Interests.

A Select Committee of nine has been provided for, whose duties are to inquire into and report at the next session of Congress the causes of the great reduction of American tonnage in the foreign carrying trade, and the great depression in the navigation interests of the country. Also, to report what measures are necessary to increase our ocean tonnage, restore our navigation interests and regain for our country the relative position which it once held among nations as a great maritime power.

The New York Times well says that when those of our leading men who represent the interests that are most broken down have visited Washington to lay facts and arguments before Congress, they have not been properly received. In many cases they have been treated as mere selfish schemers on a mere seeking their own advantage at any cost, as men whose advices ought to be repelled, and whose projects or suggestions ought to be distrusted. The great majority of the members of Congress know very little about the most capital interests of the country. They have made no investigation such as would fit them to legislate on those interests, and they have no experience and less wish to fit them to the right courses of action. As a consequence, the representatives of our most rapidly interests have constant discouragement in regard to any intelligent action on the part of Congress, and have felt, as it was, to abuse and harmass their ideas on the law-making power. It is on this account that they have drifted into a state of indifference, and have come to look hopelessly on the folly of the American nature.

It will be a gratifying of through the efforts of our Maine representatives Congress can be aroused to a sense of duty in this respect. Let the committee receive all possible information from all persons engaged in or connected with the which especially from Maine, and such measures will be started for improving our prospects. The committee will find strong in New York, and probably in Boston. But New York and Boston can furnish all the information that may be required upon the subject. Our own State, of course, is more largely interested in these than any other, and our leading men should be heard. The committee should visit Portland and Bangor, the two most prominent coast towns where tens of business need to flourish so extensively as they now do in the chief relations. Now is the time to take hold of the matter, if we would induce Congress to do the evils which oppress our commerce.

Oasis Advertiser learns that two of the Brothers, James of Shaw Brothers, Boston, have furnished a tract of the town of Vanceboro, about forty miles from Calais with a good water privilege to erect it, for the purpose of starting a large tannery—and also, that they have purchased the tannery at Forest City of Messrs. D. & H. N. Hill, for which they paid some thirty thousand dollars. They are erecting a saw mill on the river at Vanceboro, for the purpose of sawing lumber, and which they erect the works for their tannery. The company is said to own extensive tracts of land in different States, and the Canadas, and are possessed of ample means, both and energy for conducting business, and are said the kind of gentlemen we need to develope there ources of this section of the country. Vanceboro is on the New Brunswick line where the E. & N. A. Railway is to run. This it will be seen that this great enterprise is having the anticipated effect of being a great aid to build up the country through which it passes.

"Inauspicious opening of Grant's administration" is now the Democratic song. The mild Hinckley, the amiable and accomplished Blair, the honest ring master Colfax, Smythe, old lady Wallace, the robust Pollard, and other pall bearers of the last carcass address, have found the new order of the particularly insufferable. Dirges in the order by the great pall of the ex-poll.

General Butler has a plan to simplify the manner of removing disabilities, which he will present to the House. All applicants except members of the rebel Cabinet, and some other high officials specifically set out, may by this plan, complete the oath and subscribing to certain conditions, have restored to citizenship. It will require a two-thirds vote of both Houses to annul the bill a year.

Retrenchment is the order. The Washington forts to cut down the pay of civil officers at the navy yards everywhere. Democratic friends begin to recognize the economy of the new administration.

In the little town of Greenville, Tenn., lives Andrew Johnson, who once filled the Presidential chair. He is now of course. With no client to seduce, our readers cannot mistake the ear-marks of this extract from a speech made in said Greenville the other day, to the gaping crowd of rebels. (We believe we have heard the same sentiment before.)

"In early life I was elected Alderman, then Mayor, then to the Legislature, then to the State Senate, then a member of Congress, then Governor of the State for two years. After which I was elected to the United States Senate, and was there when the war broke out. During the war I was made Military Governor, was then elected Vice President of the United States, and upon the death of Mr. Lincoln I became by an inscrutable Providence President of this great nation."

"Poor little feeble Mister B-r-o-w-n!"

CUBAN NEWS. The Spaniards in Cuba are secretly urging the Home Government to arm the blacks, with little prospect of success.

Three Indians were killed during the disturbances in Havana on last Sunday. It is said, for reply to the insults of Spaniards.

The city is becoming more and more turbulent. A great crowd of Spaniards cheered over the execution of the Cuban Romero. He was shot on the wharf in sight of the steamer who were leaving for Africa. The Spaniards had furiously demanded his life.

The impression still prevails that Sandia de Cuba has been taken by the rebels. It is reported that there are treasons and leaks from Matanzas.

In some of the Indiana Democratic districts of the Legislature there are independent Democratic candidates pledged not to resign in order to break a quorum, and thus prevent the ratification of the Fifteenth Amendment.

Political and Personal.

Pennsylvania yesterday ratified the 15th amendment to the Constitution, being the fourteenth State to adopt it.

Secretary Borie made an official visit to the Naval School at Annapolis Thursday.

"Mack" writes to the Cincinnati Enquirer that old Mr. Bill was terribly cut up because his son General Frank was removed from the office of Pacific Railroad Commissioner, which is very likely true.

An election will be held in the City of Memphis, Tenn., the other day, for School Commissioner and a Board of Education, resulted in a sweeping Republican triumph, the Republicans electing the Commissioner and three-fourths of the members of the Board of Education. The election passed off very quietly, and a full, straight vote was polled.

Gen. H. Pendleton Tenn., is talked of as Democratic candidate for Governor of Ohio.

It is reported that Andrew Johnson has consented not to run for another Congressional term, that many thousand Republican votes by him in the counties.

The Austin, Texas Republican of the 13th states that from indications from all parts of the country it is fully assured that General A. J. Hamilton will be the next Governor almost by acclamation.

Hon. Edward Bates of St. Louis, Attorney General under President Lincoln, died Thursday afternoon.

The Washington Star says that the Republican Congressional Committee, to which was referred the memorial from the White Sulphur Springs, is about two days behind time, and is now engaged by Mrs. Stowe, instead of Senator Patterson, in New Hampshire. Mrs. Stowe is said to be from Greenville. We hope that Mr. Johnson of Washington county, Maine, will not be disappointed. With both great lights in the field, surely we are going to have a rousing time, especially, as we expect to have Mr. Nasmith, a distinguished orator, also present. Gen. Grant is now in the field, and we believe will be elected.

Chicago had another conflagration on Monday, which inspired the following paragraph in the Evening Post:

"Chicago now, the Herald tells us, is 'rising from the ashes' like the fabled bird. Chicago was always doing this. Whenever anything happened to her, she 'rose from the ashes' with increased vigor. When anything else happened to her, she 'rose from the ashes' with increased energy. Whenever anything else happened to her, she 'rose from the ashes' with increased spring, bearing, and vim. Whenever anything else happened to her, she 'rose from the ashes' with increased power. Now, when the great fire has left her in ashes, she rises again, and more vigorous than ever. Chicago is really not fair. Grant is nothing to her. Chicago is the ever-rising, ever-soaring, ever-lasting, ever-living, ever-new Phœnix of the period. Chicago is the immortal bird. Chicago is the Phœnix. Chicago is the Phœnix. Chicago is the Phœnix

In an interview tonight between the President and a delegation of Mississippians representing the Constitution and Republican elements of that State, the President said he thought the best plan to quiet the opposing parties in Mississippi would be for Congress to authorize the Constitution to be again submitted to the people and a separate vote taken on the feature objected to by the Conservatives, and that in the meantime the present military commanders should control the States.

The Forty-First Congress.

FIRST SESSION.

WASHINGTON, March 26.

SENATE.

Mr Hamlin introduced a bill in addition to several acts for establishing a permanent seat of government for the United States and to resume legislative powers delegated to cities of Washington and Georgetown, and a bill to establish Probate Court in the District of Columbia.

The financial bill then came up as unfinished business of yesterday.

Mr Kellogg withdrew his pending amendment to the amendment of Mr. Wilson.

Mr Wilson then modified his amendment so as to provide, that whenever the amount of U. S. notes, and circulating notes of national banks combined should be in excess of $[illegible]00,000,000, the Secretary of the Treasury should be required to fund to the forty bonds. Senators to the extent of such excess, until the amount of notes outstanding shall be reduced to $350,000,000. He said that this plan, proposed in this amendment would relieve the South and the West without doing at the same time injustice to other portions of the country which would be done by the plan of the committee.

Mr Conkling argued generally against the bill.

Mr Williams moved to amend the amendment of Mr. Wilson by fixing the limit of the issue of circulating notes at $310,000,000 instead of three hundred and fifty million clause directing the Secretary of the Treasury to cancel U. S. notes as the said $10,000,000 of circulation notes are issued.

Mr Sherman denied that the committee's bill proposed any injustice to any portion of the country.

Considerable discussion ensued and the amendment offered by Mr Williams to Mr Wilson's amendment was rejected.

After some further discussion the Senate went into executive session and soon after adjourned till Monday.

HOUSE.

Mr Banks reported a joint resolution declaring sympathy of the people of the United States with the people of Cuba in their patriotic efforts to secure their independence and to establish a Republican form of government and guaranteeing personal liberty and equal political rights of all people, and that Congress will give its constitutional support to the President of the United States whenever he may deem it expedient to recognize the independence and sovereignty of such republican government. Recommitted and ordered to be printed.

Mr Butler called up the motion to reconsider the vote of yesterday by which the tenure of office repeal bill was referred to the judiciary committee, and suggested that there be added to the House report a bill an additional section requiring the President to return his nomination to Congress within thirty days of their being made.

A long debate followed lasting until 6 o'clock, when vote of reference was reconsidered and motion of reference withdrawn.

The question was then taken in concurrence in the Senate amendment, and the House refused to concur by a vote of 70 to 99, so the bill goes back to the Senate as a simple repeal of the tenure of office act.

LOCAL AND MAINE ITEMS.

—To-morrow being Easter Day, there will be Divine service in St. John's Church, French street, at half-past ten in the morning, and half-past seven in the evening.

The service this evening is the Easter Eve service, which is held in the Sunday School Room.

—The First Baptist Church of this city after an interim of a full year are made glad in the settlement of a Pastor, Rev. F. T. Hazelwood. He begins his ministry to-morrow. The Watchman & Reflector, of last week says:

The Rev. F. T. Hazelwood, a graduate of Brown and Newton, has resigned his pastorate at Ellsworth, and accepted the unanimous call of the First Baptist church of Bangor, and will enter upon his duties the last Sunday of the present month. This intelligence, communicated to us by a friend in Bangor, announces what cannot fail to commend itself as a pastoral relation eminently fit to be made. Mr. H. stands among the best men which Newton has of late years sent forth. His position was an important one in Ellsworth, and he has filled it ably and efficiently, proving that, as Providence calls, he is suited to the larger field he enters, and to the honored succession of pastors with which the First church in Bangor has been favored these many years.

—We had a slight flight of snow yesterday afternoon which in the evening turned to rain, and at 11 p.m. it came down pretty briskly. Sleighing has seen its best day for this winter.

—The western cars were several hours late last night from some cause which we did not learn.

—March came in like a lion and has thus far been remarkably lamb-like. Only five days more of the third month. After March—what?

—Yesterday morning a horse with a nice sleigh attached, finding himself without a driver set out on his own account, ran down York street to the stream, and not being able to "down brakes," jumped off the wharf upon the broken ice. Horse and sleigh were uninjured much to the wonder of every body.

MR. EDITOR,—Will you please inform us through the columns of The Whig whether any Republican members of the City Government conspired to elect Hugh Ross Harbor Master, and thus to furnish the Democratic party employment for their principal canvasser, King? And if so, what Republican officer was elected in consequence of such trade, and who are the gentlemen who consummated it? Let us have the names of the persons who have been engaged in such disreputable business. A.

APPLETONS' NEW JOURNAL. Messrs. Appleton & Co. announce that they will begin, early in March, the publication of a Weekly Journal, which shall be devoted to popular current literature, and an organ of advanced opinion with respect to all the great interests of society, popular science in its best sense, and of art. We hail this announcement with pleasure, and trust that Appleton & Co. will, in this venture, justify and increase the reputation of their house. Vigorous, earnest, and high toned journals will always prove a welcome addition to our periodical literature. Victor Hugo's great new English romance will be published in Appletons' Journal, which of itself will prove a great attraction. In the field of illustration, this Journal will introduce a few novelties, such as presenting with every number a steel plate engraving, a large cartoon engraved on wood, or an illustrated supplement.

—As a velocipedist was rotating his "machine" across Kenduskeag bridge sidewalk yesterday afternoon an unknown anti-velocipedist organized and constituted himself a police force and proceeded to suppress the young gent. There was a slight rebellion against this usurpation, but size conquered, and the rider went off on foot, trailing his steed behind him.

—Rev. F. T. Hazelwood, who accepted the call of the First Baptist Church in this city, has arrived and will occupy the pulpit to-morrow for the first time.

—Notice of the International Steamship Company will be found in another column. On Monday both their elegant steamers are to take their regular place on the line. The New England has been recently newly furnished and painted throughout.

Piatt; interesting "Incidents in the Spanish Struggle," by Bill Rocks; part 3 of "A Stranded Ship," by L. Clarke Davis; "A Political Romance," by W. F. G. Shanks; also articles by Bayard Taylor, Clarence Cook, E. C. Stedman, J. S. C. Abbott, and other standard magazine writers. G. P. Putnam & Son, 661 Broadway, New York, Publishers. For sale in Bangor by D. A. Bartlett.

—Another velocipede race is, to some of to-night at the Pioneer Chapel Riding School, where the excitement is still unabated. Three prizes are offered, the race to be open to all competitors, and the contest will be animating. Ladies have a chance to see the sport free of charge.

—Camels proposed [illegible] for Gilmore's great festival in Boston [illegible]

—Mr. McLain will have his Reindeer on exhibition at Norombega Market this day, and also in the evening, to give those a chance to see them who cannot take time in the day.

The Belfast Journal says smelt are remarkably plenty in that region. They frequently cross the road in [illegible] of travellers, and more smelts are marketed than for some years.

—The Calais Advertiser is informed that the residence of Mr. Wm. Anderson, known as the Stewart place, in Baileyville, caught fire about noon, on Thursday last, and was entirely destroyed, together with nearly all the furniture, bedding and wearing apparel, of the family. The fire caught from some defect in the chimney.

REMARKABLE RESULT OF A TRIAL IN MARYLAND. [illegible] a gang of ruffians broke into the Colored Methodist Church [illegible] where a fair was being held by the members of the congregation, and with an unprovoked murdered a colored man named Wesley Ross, who was doing the fair with his wife and child. The assassin and their accomplices, ultra "nigger" haters and active Democratic partizans, were taken before a magistrate, and during their examination deliberately walked out of the magistrate's office. The State's Attorney had them again taken into custody, and George W. Sills and John McGirr were indicted by the Grand Jury of Allegany County for murder, and another of the gang, Thomas Simmons, was tried there on the charge of assault with intent to kill, but was acquitted. With this fact before him, and in the evidence that justice would not be awarded to the alleged murderers, and a fair trial in Allegany, the State's Attorney had the cases of McGirr and Sills removed to the Circuit Court of Washington County, where the trial, if such it can be called, took place last week. Two witnesses for the prosecution were nearly all colored persons, but they had been eye witnesses to the tragedy. One testified to having seen Sills and McGirr enter the church on the night of the murder—Sills with a knife in his hand, and McGirr with a razor. This testimony was corroborated by several persons. Three witnesses, who were standing in the immediate vicinity of the murdered man, testified to having seen Sills cut Ross, and McGirr striking him immediately afterward, and jumping upon and trampling his body when he fell to the floor from the loss of blood. Upon this indisputable testimony the State rested its case. The evidence for the prisoner was that principally of the parties engaged in the outrage. They testified that "a strange man" entered the church with them, and they saw him leave after the murder was accomplished. Of course they didn't know who the "strange man" was. It will hardly be believed in face of positive testimony as to the guilt of the prisoners, that a Washington County jury, after thirty minutes deliberation, rendered a verdict of "not guilty," and let those ruffians again loose upon society. Whig & Courier

At the recent dinner at Delmonico's, given by members of the New York Press, where the wit and humor ran at least in parallel equality and force as compared to toasts, alternately and impartially hitting both, the following poetical toast was read by Allen Carey:

You know my friends, through whose kind errors
We meet around this board to-day,
Has been said that man embraces
Woman about, with your leave, I say.
This latter holds a special case
Than in any gener al way.

We women have been caressed and worshiped,
Fawned around and flattered every where
But the high, honored place we wanted
Is ours in sober truth to day;
For with the equal rights we crave,
The equal rights to pay.

Pardon the mention of the shillings
(You see that thrown so in any way)
And think not that I speak as shillings
Your courtesies in courtship, pray
For each of us, our Sarah Shillings
Would name the happiday.

We mean to prove our pr ise no false
And while for that good end we pray,
At lightning, harnessed to the Cable
Trample old ocean into spray
With cows that women sit at table
Above the salt to-day.

CHAPTER I.

A LIFE GLORIOUSLY STARTED.

Towards the close of a beautiful day in June, 1857, a man and woman, mounted upon fleet horses, came gallopping over one of the great plains of the West and drew rein in the shade of a clump of cotton woods upon the bank of a beautiful river. They had ridden far and rapidly. Their steeds were panting, and covered with sweat and foam.

"We must give the horses a breathing spell," said the former, stopping to the ground, and his companion nodded a graceful assent, as she followed his example.

The couple were evidently father and daughter.

The man was in the prime of life, hale and hearty, with a large frame, which was strong and athletic, without losing to be fettered and prepossessing. His dress, though somewhat peculiar to the advances stages of civilization, and there was an air of refinement about him that showed him to be a man of intelligence and courage.

In no way, his daughter was equally picturesque and attractive.

In the early flush of womanhood, with a form, sweet and tender face, dark eyes, clear as crystal, and hair of jet, that in long locks softly flutted with the motion of the rose, with amber curls floating behind her, she was as graceful as a gazelle, as light-hearted as a bird, as loyal as a flower, and as spirited as an untamed fatelope.

The station in which the couple had landed was Wood River, a trading post on the Platte, in Nebraska, at a point little more northwest of Fort Kearney.

"Are you tired, Miriam?" asked the father, as he threw the bridle reins of his horse over the limb of a tree.

"Tired, father?" rejoined the maiden, with a happy laugh. "Why, I never felt better after a day's ride. Every muscle has been filled with ... and exhilaration. I feel as free as a rover Mustang."

The father smiled fondly at the ... with a look full of pride and love.

"I am glad you are not tired, Miriam, for the hunt is not all the hunter's. Upon your ... Black Hills that the ... good chance of them. While this order was being carried out, Hubert and several others were engaged in surveying the scene.
